PRESENTER:

Nurse Educator, Operating Rooms, Āhua Tohu Pōkangia, Perioperative Services, Te Toka Tumai, Auckland

Minimally invasive mitral valve surgery (MIMVS) is transforming cardiac care, offering patients reduced recovery times and improved outcomes. But what does this innovation mean for perioperative nursing practice?

In this session, Chen, Perioperative Nurse Educator and senior nurse in Cardiothoracic Theatres at Te Toka Tumai Auckland, will share the nursing journey in establishing and supporting MIMVS. Drawing on her role as nursing lead for the programme, Chen will explore how the service was set up, the evolving nursing roles, technical aspects, and the unique challenges faced along the way. With insights recently presented at the Annual Cardiothoracic Surgery Meeting of Aotearoa New Zealand, this webinar highlights the critical contributions of OR nurses to advancing surgical practice.

Join us to gain practical lessons learned, deepen your understanding of perioperative nursing in cardiothoracic surgery, and reflect on how innovation can shape safer, more effective care for patients.
