

YOU'RE INVITED TO A ZOOM WEBINAR

RESPONDING TO ACUTE DETERIORATION IN OLDER PEOPLE USING A CLINICAL REASONING APPROACH

WEDNESDAY 6 AUGUST,
7PM – 8PM

DR MICHAL BOYD

Nurse Practitioner & Honorary Associate Professor, University of Auckland

Recognising and responding early to acute deterioration in frail older adults is critical. This webinar will explore how to use a clinical reasoning approach to identify changes in residents' health and behaviour, and how best to respond with care and compassion.

Learn how to support physical deterioration in aged care residents and gain skills to assess and escalate appropriately and fine tune communication strategies to use with residents and their whānau during times of concern or crisis.

This webinar is ideal for nurses, healthcare assistants, GPs, allied health professionals, and anyone working with frail older people.

Dr Michal Boyd is a Nurse Practitioner with Equinox Health Ltd and Honorary Associate Professor. Her main research interests are care of older adults living with frailty and dementia in the community and those living residential aged care, as well as advanced nursing practice and has led major research on frailty, dementia, and early warning systems in aged care.
